AVERY HAIRSTON is lighting up people's lives. The 15-year-old from New York City created a charity called RelightNY. It helps people who struggle to pay their energy bills by giving them compact fluorescent lightbulbs, which reduce long-term energy costs. They are also better for the environment than regular bulbs. "People who can afford the bulbs, which are a bit expensive, should buy them for themselves and supply them to others," Avery told TFK.
